The gold medal for the best young mare was won by Adbolton Bountiful, Mr. Ernest Beeley's (Rathgar, Dublin) two-year old chestnut.

COUNTY WEXFORD MEDICAL

Mr. Beresford—I never intruded myself on this Board, but I do not intend to abrogate my rights.

Mr. M. J. Hughes, J.P.—I say you have no such rights under the statute you quote. Which, if not as old as Queen Anne, goes back to the early years of Queen Victoria's reign. You have the right to be present while the outdoor relief is being considered, and take part in the proceedings so far as they relate to the distribution of outdoor relief. That was mainly the duty of your predecessors in all the duty of your predecessors in a wrangle ensued, in which the Chairman called for order, but there was no order, several Guardians angrily declaiming, and repeated references being made to the treatment of the Franciscans and to other recent incidents in which the Guardians were in conflict with the Local Government Board. The Chairman thereupon adjourned the meeting without transacting any business.

At a meeting of the above practitioners beld at White's Hotel, Wexford, on Marcilst, the following resolution was unanimousl passed, viz.:

That at this, our first meeting since the settle ment of the certification question, we, the Count Wexford medical practitioners, wish to record ou

On Saturday night a great recruiting rally took place in Palace street, under the anapices of the City and County of Dublin Recruiting Committee. The crowd assumed such erformous dimensions that the traffic in Dame street was blocked, and the lorry platform had to be pulled back close to the Castle gate. Mr. S. W. Maddock, who presided, pointed out that Ireland was the only country in Europe which had not compulsion for military service. A great duty, therefore, lay upon each young Irishman to play a man's part. If the men at home only showed the same service. A great duty, therefore, lay upon each young Irishman to play a man's part. If the men at home only showed the same enthusiasm and moral as the troops at the front, victory would be speedy and sure. Too much store should not be set on the land operations alone. Sea power had abolished German commerce, but the Admiralty required now 40,000 men to help to man the new ships that were coming into being. The call was, therefore, clear and insistent—more men for our regiments and for our ships. Sergeant Prunty, of the Irish Guards, and Private Leonard, R.D.F., also addressed the meeting, which concluded with a dramatic scene. A man in the crowd asked permission to say a few words. It was readily granted, where upon the stranger clambered up on the plat form, and said he was a Tipperary man of the farming class. He went on to say that he had never been educated or taught to love England or the Empire, that seventeen years ago he was a pro-Boer, but to-day it was only squalid ignorance that allowed Irishmen to put on the Sinn Fein clothes. A number of young Irishmen, to excuse their cowardice, were now calling out that they were Sinn Frienz. The Sinn Fein movement was a clean movement on its own merits, but it wanted no adherents who only discovered its beauty when a great war was raging, and found it an excuse for not serving with the glorious Irish troops at the front. Irishmen in this awful crisis ought to bury all their petty and local differences. (Cheers.) Our Allies were fighting for liberty against a mad despotism. DUBLIN AND DISTRICT.

Concert at College of Surgeons.—A concert will be held this evening in the Examination Hall of the Royal College of Surgeons, at 8 o'clock, in aid of the bands of the Officers' Training Corps.

Lecture on "The Greek Church,"—This afternoon the Rev. E. Savell Hicks, M.A., will give a lecture at the Unitarian Church, Stephen's Green, at 5 p.m., on "The Greek Church," which is the Orthodox Church of Russia. Some characteristic specimens of Russian Church music (the words translated from the Slavonic by Madame Esposito) will be sung, and there will be a short organ recital of Russian music. A small, but interesting, collection of Russian Ikons and other religious objects will be on view. There will be no Service, and no charge for admission, but a collection will be made for the Polish Relief Fund.

MONAGHAN WOUNDING CASE.

Daniel Duffy, of Tanderagiebrack, pleaded not guilty to a charge of wounding a man name? Francis M Guinness, Corcaghan, on 7th February last.

When the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty, his 'ordship bound the prisoner over to keep the peace for twelve months, and then, turning to the jury, addressed them thus:—"I have pleasure in discharging you, because I would not entrust another case to you, having regard to that verdict—totally against the evidence."

Mr. Justice Pim disposed of the appeals in the Record Court.

The criminal business of Cavan Assises was opened in Cavan Courthouse on Saturday by Mr. Justice Ross, Mr. Justice Dodd presiding in the appeal court. Colonel Edward Alexander Henry Pos. D.L. Ballyconnell, High Sheriff, and Mr. T. R. Blackley, J.P., Sub-Sheriff, were in attendance.

The following were sworn on the Grand Jury:—

WATERFORD COUNTY. The following gentlemen were sworn on the County Grand Jury :-

WEXFORD.

At the Wexford Assizes, before Mr. Justice Gibson, an appeal was heard on behalf of the Wexford County Council against a decision of the County Court Judge awarding £350 damages to Major Loftus Bryan, of Borrmount, Kilgibbon, and £770 damages to Captain Anthony Loftus Bryan in respect of loss sustained by alleged malicious burning of the latter's gentleman's residence at Carrigmannon, Killurin, in December last. Captain Bryan gave evidence to the effect that he had been invalided home from France, and that he was subjected to considerable annovance from trespass, breaking of fences, and the larceny of timber. Counsel for the respondents suggested that the fire might have been caused owing to the unpopularity of a water bailiff, who was zealous in protecting the property. Mr. Cowman, Chairman of the Wexford Bural Council, said that there was no more popular young man in the county than Captain Bryan. After lengthy evidence regarding the outbreak of fire, which occurred about six o'clock in the morning. Mr. Justice Gibson held that the burning was malicious, and allowed Major Bryan £350 damages, and Captain Bryan £500 for the loss of furniture.

The result of the action of the United The result of the action of the United States Senate in regard to the armed merchant ship controversy has created something, like a panic in Germany. According to the French review, the Frankfort Bourse closed in a demoralised state on Saturday. It is believed in Germany that President Wilson would not hesitate to break off diplomatic relations with Germany. Sir Cecil Spring Rice has denied the German allegation that Great Britain during the Russo-Japanese War warned her people not to travel by belligerent ships.

In other words, the French reports convey the impression that the enemy's tending that they still possess the confinence of their constituents, or represent offensive effort against Verdun still con-tinues; the German reports convey the impression that it is suspended, and that the enemy are engaged in holding their gains against the French. We need have no doubt that the French reports convey no doubt that the French reports convey the more accurate impression. But it is an interesting, and not unimportant, matter for speculation why the Germans matter for speculation why the Germans should seek to convey an erroneous impression. During the last few days the tore of the remarks to which the German Press is permitted and advised to give expression has undergone a suggestive change. It indicates that to regard the German effort as having for its object nothing less than the capture of Verdun and the breaking of the French line was to cherish an extravagant expectation. The report issued in Paris this afternoon indicates that the Germans are continuing their desperate efforts to break through. One great attack at six o'clock yestenday afternoon was defeated by the wonderful French artillery and infantry fire, but in the course of the night the bombardment grew in intensity all along the front round Verdum. The late news tonight should be most interesting. It is said here to-day that the results of the fighting round Verdum are regarded with the greatest satisfaction by the British General Staff, and that Sir William Robertson, the Chief of Staff at the War Office, has expressed himself, as being extremely pleased with the situation.

Mr. Garvin, commenting upon the situa-be with speed and and despatched." Mr. Garvin, commenting upon the situation at Verdun in the Observer to-day, says that the Germans never can "recapture the first, fine careless rapture." "As an effort of this kind continues, it is with such attacks as with novels. The sequel is rarely as good as the first success. The picked Corps are broken. Physique and moral are jaded. On theory we would expect the enemy, despite all his toil in bringing up the men for a fresh stage of the recurrent offensive, to work under amilitary law of diminishing returns. The theory is borne out by the facts. In the second stage the enemy up to Friday night had not gained even a tenth part of the ground and the prisoners taken in the first three days of the opening attack on the Verdun salient. On this showing we might reasonably expect the enemy to give up the game at last and to be thwarted of Verdun itself, as of Ypres and Rheims. That result would be a bitter pill for the Germans to swallow. It would mean, on the final comparison of profit and loss, the acknowledgment of a great defeat after frightful sacrifice."

For the different departments in effective and non-effective services only nominal amounts of £1,100 are vices only nominal amounts of services estimate in their flight. The news that Mr Redmond has made rrangements to send shamrocks to all the rishmen in the Fleet and to every Irish attalion at the front for St. Patrick's Day is welcome, for at such a time as the present these little bits of sentiment mean almost everything to our fighting men. It is worth while, ness. and the delivery of a few score boxes of shamrock can make but little difference in labo Appens of St. Patrick's Day and the rish Flag Day for the benefit of Irish rounded and prisoners of war, Mr. T. W. Rolleston writes to point out that, if any-one wants to fly an Irish flag on that occaon, he will be entirely unable to procure one anywhere in the Three Kingdoms unless he makes it himself. He states that the true emblem of Ireland is to be found in the Irish quartering on the Royal Banner. "It is a golden harp, with silver strings, and it bears no crown—the absence of which has often been absurdly supposed of which has often been absurdly supposed to give a seditious character to an Irish flag. It is not easy to see how one can be more loyal than the King's Banner. The official and recognised device is that which every loyal subject can, and ought to, use without making unauthorised additions to it, and it may be hoped that the wakers of these goods will some time take makers of these goods will some time take the trouble to supply it." On Wednesday the report stage of the Supplementary and Navy Estimates will be taken, and on Thursday the report stage of the Civil Service Vote on Account.

When the House of Lords meets on Wednesday Lord Sydenham will initiate a debate on the important question of shipping by asking the Government what measures have been taken to regulate or restrict the chartering or purchase of British ships during the period of war; what control is exercised over chartered vessels which continue to fly the British flag; has it been rendered impossible for aliens of enemy nationality to charter British vessels? When this subject has been disposed of Lord Bryce is to inquire whether the War Office intend to supply our forces in Flanders with light steel helmets similar to those which have proved of such value for trench fighting in the French Army.

The posting of the black and blue posters in London yesterday calling up eight groups of married men aroused considerable interest, but no excitement. The general remark seemed to be: "Well, we ve got to go, and that's all about it." The Central Recruiting Dépôt at Great Scotland Yard was quite busy attesting men, particularly married men joining under the Derby scheme, which is still open to them, though closed to bachelors. Single men who had been attested were also present undergoing medical examination or joining a special regiment. It is understood that all the Derby groups will be called up by midsummer, and it is hinted that the military age may be raised. These statements, however, must be taken with reserve.

GERMANS FIGHTING A LOSING BATTLE.

Mr. John Raphael, the special correspo ing the fight for Verdun, says—I am assured of the London Daily Express in Paris, disci that the enemy is playing Joffre's game by wasting so enormous a number of lives on this side-battle. The balance of the week-end's fighting has been unmistakably in favour of the French. This battle is no affair of hours, or even days. There may be, must be, will be, unpleasant moments, moments when the pessionists may be excused for looking at the may, and calculating the distance from Verdun to Paris, but I have absolute confidence in the unmate result, and this confidence is based on inthoritative news given to me direct from he best possible source. It should not be forgotten that the victory on the Marne was won at the very moment when the enemy was hoarsely howling a pean of joy and hate. In that moment Germany was dereated. As Joffre said then: "It is not over yet, but Germany's said then: "It is not over yet, but Cer. hope of victory is definitely scotched."

In all the circumstances the latter seems much the more probable view, but the Admiralty may be trusted to form a pretty accurate judgment, having many sources of knowledge, which the public have not. If the Moewe's commanders did succeed in getting her back their skill would certainly have merited the Iron Crusses which are said to have requited it. But just because we should sooner have her inside our blockade than outside it is difficult to believe that she would have taken such a big risk to get there.

PASTORAL.

PASTORAL.

At all the Roman Catholic churches in the Archdiocese of Dublin the Archbishop's annual Pastoral letter, issued at the beginning of Lent, was read yesterday. It contained the following paragraphs:—

"At this most critical time our prayers should be offered up with fervour for the restoration of peace, not of a peace that might but serve as a time of preparation for a new and, perhaps, more widespread and more envenomed conflict, but of that peace which the Church prays for in the Votive Mass for Peace in the Roman Missal—a lasting peace, in which, our hearts being devoted to the keeping of God's holy law, we may be free from all fear of disturbance by our enemies."

"In view of some reproachful comments that have of late been publicly made as to a insufficiency of chaplains with the Army, it is but due to the priests of this diocese to have it put on record that auch comments can have no reference to them. From the early days of the war until now, both by the number who have offered their vices as chaplains, and by the zeal and burage in the dischape of their religious futies, the Dublin clergy have borne their full share, and more than their full share, of the arduous priestly duty that falls to the lot of military chaplains engaged in service with the troops in time of war.

The Pastoral recommends prayers for the souls of those who lost their lives in the war, and for all who had to endure the hardships of the war, whether as combatants or as peaceful citizens, thousands of whom were driven from their homes and left without food or shelter in the districts laid waste by military operations.

To the editor of the Irish times.

Sir.—Your correspondent, "The Straight Road," deserves our sympathy, and so do his daughters. One correspondent condemns him to be shot, yet admits that most so-called "educated" women are absolutely useless. "The Straight Road' could hardly be expected to teach his daughters how to cook, to make clothes, to mind the baby, or to use a sewing machine, for the best of all reasons. He, therefore, in all probability, sent his daughters to be "educated," and paid high fees for such "education," with the result that his daughters probably cannot boil an egg, but could tell you, for hours on end, why they should get a vote, although they are utterly worthless assets to the State.

It is the system of girls "education" that is rotter, and I trust that his critics will train their verbal "four-point-sevens" on the system, and no longer on "The Straight Road."—Yours, etc.,

LIEUT. A. W. LANE JUINA.

Lieutenant A. William Lane Joynt, whose name appears in to-day's casualty list, was the only son of the late Mr. Albert E. R. Joynt, barrister, of Dublin, who died in 1902, and of Mrs. Glenleigh J. S. Taylor, of 21 Ashburnham Mansions, London, S.W. He was educated at Radley, and from there obtained a commission in the Devonshire Regiment, and some six months ago was transferred to the Motor Machine Gun Service. He was killed in action on the 26th February in France.

1901-2 (clasp), N.W. Frontier, 1902 (slightly wounded), and the European War, 1914-15 (despaches and D.S.O.). Lieutenant-Colonel Davidson-Houston was appointed Brigade the command of his regiment, the 58th Rifles, Frontier Force, I.A., after the death in action on the 51st October, 1914, of the then commanding officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Venour, who was killed on the morning following the night attack in which he so gallantly and successfully led his regiment in the re-capture of a section of trenches taken by the Germans in the neighbourhood of Festubert. LieutenantColonel Davidson-Houston had commanded in his regiment ever since with conspicuous ability in all the actions in which this regiment has taken part: at Festubert in October, and again in November, 1914; at Givenchy, December, 1914 (where he gained the D.S.O.);
at Neuve Chapelle, at Richebourg l'Avoné, and finally at Manquissart on the 25th September last, where, it is feared, he, together with several of his officers, fell fighting to the last in a gallant attempt to hold the German trenches which had been won that day, and from which the rest of the brigade was forced to retire in the face of an overwhelming

STOCK EXCHANGE SETTLING

Mr. A. Mitchelson, of the firm of A. Mitchelson and Co., Cardiff and Loudon, has concluded an arrangement by which the bulk of the shares in the Celtic Collieries, Limited, will be transferred to a strong and influential South Wales group. The present Board of Directors will retire in favour of a new Board, consisting of Lord Rhondda (Chairman), Mr. H. S. Berry, Mr. J. P. Cadogan, Mr. C. P. Hailey, and Mr E. Plisson. The sale of the coal will be entrusted to Messrs Lysberg, Limited, who are also the agents for the Glamorgan Coal Company and a number of other leading South Wales collieries. A dividend of 10 per cent. on Celtics has been declared for the year 1915, compared with 4 per cent. for 1914, and 3 per cent. for the two preceding years. The capital involved in this deal is £230,000 in £1 Ordinary Shares.

The Statist of Saturday contained a crosspage analysis of 150 Rubber Shares, which investors will find useful in appraising the value of their purchases. The most important points are—the market capitalisation per planted area, the last "all-in" cost of production, and the past year's output per planted area. The Statist adds:—"In the present year it looks as if the average price of rubber will be quite 3s. per lb., and from the six reports already published it seems likely that companies which ended their year on December 51st last will obtain an average of well over 2s. 6d. per lb. for their produce. The immediate outlook, therefore, is for allround substantial increase of dividends, not-withstanding the incidence of the excess profits tax."

for LIGHT DELIVERY VANS & TRADE RUNABOUTS

COMMERCIAL users of pneumatic tyres are now officially entitled to preferential terms from Motor Agents for Avon Tyres.

G. The simple rules laid down are that vehicles for which tyres are supplied at a discount shall be used purely for trade purposes and consequently exempt from Local Taxation Licence; and that the purchaser sign a formal Agreement not to re-sell, framed for the Agent's protection by the M.T.A.

C. Avon agents and stockists now hold supplies of these forms and will be glad to quote business motor-owners for immediate delivery of ordinary or contract purchases. I The "bonus of miles" paid by Avon endurance is, of course, exceptionally important and effects a definite reduction in delivery costs. Please write for "Reasons Why." Catalogue and name of nearest Stockist.
